I strongly support a robust national defense to ensure the safety of our citizens and the preservation of our way of life. In our world, we have adversaries not only state, but non state actors that seek to harm or undermine us A well-equipped and modern and powerful military is essential to defending our freedoms and deterring aggressors.

The United States has long stood as a beacon of hope, a force for good, and a problem-solver on the world stage. But let me be clear: I have always said, we are not occupiers, and we should never be drawn into foreign conflicts unnecessarily. I believe America should always strive to be a stabilizing presence in global affairs. We should always encourage diplomacy and peaceful resolution of conflicts whenever possible.

However, I will only support the use of military force when it is in our vital national interest or when our security, sovereignty, or citizens are directly threatened. We must not commit American lives and resources to endless or unwinnable wars. Clear objectives, realistic missions, and a strong exit strategy should always guide our national security decisions.

A vibrant economy and a powerful military are the cornerstones of deterrence. When America is economically and militarily strong —our allies feel safe and our adversaries think twice. That strength protects peace at home and stability throughout the World.
